War is like a good book.

"Life could continue, with futures not so uncertain"

"war twists and shifts"

"surrender of self, voluntary or not"

"in its quiet moments... is brighter, louder, brasher, more fun, more tragic, more wasteful, more."

"wondered if I was alone in this. I don't think I am."

Mackenzhaup talks about how emotions towards war are so uncertain and how there's so many things that effect the change in himself and where he stands with war.

War is like a rollercoaster

- War gives you a high when your running, shooting at people but like when you're on a rollercoaster about to drop on the first hill.

- Bleed rushing, shooting, killing, you're smiling on a rollercoaster.

- When everything seems all wrong and just right, in a way that makes perfect sense.
